

Suggested recommendations of
The Committee of Inquiry into the Administration of Justice in the Freedom Struggle.

1. That the Department of Justice make greater use of federal marshalls to protect persons peacefully exercising constitutional rights. That when, in the presence of marshalls, citizens and local and state officials commit acts in violation of the United States Code, marshalls make arrests.
2. That greater use of injunctive relief be sought by the Justice Department in federal courts.
3. That FBI agents not native to the scene of trouble, or residents of it, be assigned to civil rights investigations.
4. That the President of the United States severely condemn the use of dogs by police as unworthy of a civilized nation, and that police using dogs be prosecuted under the United States Code.
5. That the United States Code be amended to provide reasonably swift removal of actions from state to federal courts when ~~substant~~ substantial questions of denial of constitutional rights are at issue.
6. That the federal code be amended to provide a right of appeal from an order of a federal district court remanding a case to a state court when the case concerns denial of constitutional rights.
7. That Congress authorize federal courts to grant injunctive or other mandatory relief ^{in civil rights cases} when state courts, by inordinate delay, have deprived a person of due process.
8. That when unreasonable delays occur in civil rights cases in federal courts, the "All-writs" section of the federal code be used by the Justice Department to bring a case directly to the United States Supreme Court for mandatory relief, and to speed trial.
